By Missy J. Talbot | Photos.com/Getty Images Road Runner is an email program provided by Road Runner and Time Warner Cable. Typically, Road Runner email is an East Coast-based email program, although it is now found in more places where Time Warner is used. When you have a Road Runner account, the company gives you an email address and a password so you can log into the service. It is easy to log into the service. Visit the Road Runner login page (see Resources). Click on the "Email" box and input your email address. Click the "Password" box and input your password. If you don't know either of these, contact your Road Runner or Time Warner outlet at the local phone number listed on your bill. Click "Log In" to log into the email server. Being able to head straight to Gmail.com and see all your latest messages right away is certainly more appealing than typing in your username and password every time — especially if you have a nice, secure complex password. But there are good reasons why you might want to log out of Gmail. You might be using a shared computer in a library or on a university campus, for example, or you might worry about your laptop being stolen. With that in mind, here's how to log out of Gmail. How to make Gmail your default mail app in iOS 14 The best Chromebooks How to log out of Gmail from your browser If you're sitting at the computer on which you want to log out of Gmail, the process is incredibly simple. You likely already have the Gmail browser tab open, but if you've closed it without exiting, the first step is to revisit the site in question. (Image credit: Alan Martin) 2. Click "Sign out" below your icon Your personal icon is the round one in the top right corner. It'll display your picture or, if you haven't set one, your initials. This will open a pop-out submenu, and at the bottom there will be a button labeled "Sign out". Click it. (Image credit: Alan Martin) If you want to be extra careful on a shared computer, then you probably want to press the link labeled "Remove an account" on the sign-in page that appears after you log out. Removing your account will not delete your account, but will prevent your username from being presented as an account to log into when you or someone else return to the Gmail website. (Image credit: Alan Martin) How to log out of Gmail remotely What if you checked your email in an internet café or on a friend's PC and forgot to log out? Not to worry — you can log out of Gmail remotely. Once again, the journey starts by logging back into your Gmail account from a different device. Click

your picture again, but this time press "Manage your Google Account" from the drop-down menu. (Image credit: Alan Martin)2. Go to 'Security' Select "Security" from the navigation bar on the left of the screen.(Image credit: Alan Martin)This lists all the devices on which you're currently logged into Gmail. If you see something untoward, click "Manage devices". (Image credit: Alan Martin)4. Find the rogue device The list will show all the devices on which you're currently logged in, and how recently each was last active. This should help you figure out which one you want to nix. In my case, it's the Windows desktop on the right. I can tell it from the other Windows devices because Google has helpfully labeled the laptop I'm using as "This device." Click the one you want to remove.(Image credit: Alan Martin) 5. Sign out of the remote device (Image credit: Alan Martin)Press the button labelled "Sign out," and you're done. Enjoy your new feeling of security! More Gmail tipsToday's best Apple AirPods Pro deals Many people today keep multiple email accounts in order to separate and organize their online communications. A person may have one email address for business and one for personal activities, for example. Managing multiple email accounts can be a burden, however: Typically a user has to sign in, read the email in that inbox, sign out, and then repeat the process for each additional account. However, Google recently introduced a feature to simplify the process for users of its Gmail service. With multiple sign-in enabled, users can select their different accounts from a single menu, eliminating the need to sign in and out of each one individually or to log in with different browsers. Here's how to enable the feature. 1. Go to the Google multiple sign-in setup page. If you are not already logged in to a Google account in your browser, the site will prompt you to enter credentials for one of your accounts. 2. Select On - Use multiple Google Accounts in the same web browser and check each checkbox to acknowledge that you understand the effects of using the feature and that not all Google products support account switching. 3. Click Save to retain the changes for your account. Now that you've enabled multiple sign-in, you'll have to add each extra account to Google's list. 1. Go to Gmail and log in with the same account you used above, and then click your name in the top-right corner of the page to bring up account options. Select Switch account from the menu that appears. 2. Select Sign in to another account. This action will open a new login page. 3. Enter the credentials of the next Google account, and click Sign in. Just repeat these three steps for each account you would like to add. Once you've added your accounts, switching between them in Gmail is easy. 1. Click your name in the top-right corner of the page to bring up account options. 2. Select Switch account from the menu that appears. 3. Select the account you wish to check, and Gmail will automatically switch to that account and display your inbox.
